THE PAGE'S DIFFICULTY.

Be Told His Troubles Right Out at the Wedding.

A good story comes from Atlanta, but the incident happened several seasons ago. The occasion was a swell church wedding. The edifice had been gloriously decorated. The bride, surrounded by a company of grooms, flower girls and bands of honor, was slowly passing down the aisle, while the prospective bridegroom and his best man and the officiating clergyman were taking their places. The church organ was pealing forth the sounds of joyous wedding bells. Fashionable people dressed for the occasion occupied the seats of the handsome church.

It so happened that one of the girls had in the rush of business necessary to dressing for the occasion been turned over to the care of a nurse. As he passed down the main aisle of the church in company with the other younglings, who in white satin suits were doing the honors of each respective household, he suddenly espied his mother seated in one of the pews.

At this point, the organist began playing softly as the wedding party passed to the altar. Then, above the gentle strains of music clear as a bell could be heard the voice of the aforementioned small boy:

"Mamma," he shrilly cried, "mama put on my panties wrong side before, and I can't hardly walk!"

Of course the horrified matron could do nothing but blush scarlet, but lifted a prayer that the young slob would keep still from that time on. And he did, and received a hearty kiss from the bride at the close of the ceremony. This is a true story and can be vouchsafed for by those who attended the wedding.—Galveston Daily Mail.

TWO BLUFFS THAT WON.

A Pleasant Meeting Between the Bride and the Reporter.

Jack Rogers was a newspaper reporter and broker. He had hung around the Dubuque newspaper offices for a job until he had been requested to move on. So he decided to move on to Demolines. But how to get there was the question. Jack put on his thinking cap, and the result was that two hours later he found himself on a train and the conductor standing by his seat:

"Ticket?" said the conductor.

"See here, conductor," said Jack easily, "my name's Rogers, and I'm a reporter on the Des Moines Air Blast. I'm broke and I'm in a hurry to get back home with a big scoop. You let me ride and the office'll fix it up with you. See?"

"Well," said the conductor, "I guess that'll do all right. The road feels friendly toward The Air Blast. In fact, the editor is in the back coach. Come along and I'll introduce you. If he says you're all right, if goes."

Jack was knocked all in a heap at the turn things had taken, but he had nothing to do but follow the conductor. They halted in front of a man in the coach, and the conductor said:

"Mr. Rogers, this is Mr. Rogers. He says he's a reporter on your paper, and wants the office to pay for his transportation when he gets to Des Moines."

"How do you do, Mr. Rogers?" said the editor pleasantly, extending his hand. "Glad to see you. Sit down here with me." The conductor didn't wait for any more, but went out.

"Well, this is nice of you," said Jack, too astonished and embarrassed to talk straight. "Of course, I'm not on your paper, but I'm broke and yearned to the conductor, hoping to get a job and square it up later."

"Oh, that's all right, my boy," said the other. "Neither am I on the paper. I'm only riding on the editor's pass."—San Francisco Bulletin.

THE OLD TIME BELLE.

The Lucy Medford, illustrated, written

An extract from the journal of a young lady of fashion, several months ago, which has been quite popular. It is the author's discovery that it is better to have a part of elegant living necessary to keep juvenile interests alive.

The belle of the ball had just passed down the grand staircase. Her name was Lucy Medford. The author says, "Lucy Medford is well known to us all."
